Title: Regarding problems faced by residents of Munroe Islands in Kerala -laid.

SHRI SURESH KODIKUNNIL (MAVELIKKARA): Munroe Islands, located at the junction of two water bodies, Ashtamudi Lake and the Kallada River, in Kollam district, Kerala is facing an ecological disaster as it is gradually sinking due to tidal surge and low-lying reaches of the islands are prone to flooding. The population of 10000 plus in Munroe Island is facing an existential crisis. The government must declare a Munroe Islands ecological and environment protection plan and secure the residents and take further steps in promoting tourism in Munroe Islands as a sustainable livelihood for its residents by declaring a special package and including it under a special tourism zone.
