

to. The Civil Aviation delegations of India and Singapore also agreed on a package of additional air traffic rights in the last round of bilateral talks held in July, 1997. This package is, however, yet to be approved by the Government. The other pending requests from South East Asian and East Asian countries would require bilateral negotiations at Government level before reaching an agreement.

(c) and (d) The representatives of national carriers are associated in the bilateral negotiations for exchange of traffic rights and the interests of the national carriers are given due regard while finalising the package.
