

the police. With great respect to the police force, the philosophy, the training and the performance year after year is of a different type than that of the force which you are contemplating to raise by this Bill for the destruction of terrorist, because terrorists, in my opinion, are worse than enemies. Enemies we know; our probable enemies we know, but terrorist we do not know, whether they are being protected by X or Y or by the State Government Ministers; we do not know who are protecting the terrorists. To find out terrorists and be able to destroy them is a more difficult task than fighting against known enemies across the border.

SHRI GHULAM NABI AZAD : About Syed Shahabuddin's point, I want to make it clear that we had no force whatsoever in any form either BSF or CRPF as far as the terrorists are concerned. We have no force as such so far which is basically and primarily meant to fight out the terrorists. Most of the Hon. Members have said that we should wind up other forces. We have not so far the anti-terrorist force. This is entirely a new force.

In continuation of the Financial Memorandum circulated with the National Security Guard Bill, 1986 (Bill No. 93 of 1986) I wish to state that National Security Guard is a part of the Central Police organisations under the administrative control of the Ministry of Home Affairs. For administrative convenience, no separate budget head has been provided. On account of its very nature of duties, their pay and establishment expenditure are met from one or more Central Police Organisations having their own head of account.
