for 'twenty-eight davs' substitute 'fourteen days' Page 4, line 17, for 'thiee' substitute 'two'

for "twenty-eighth subst-tute" "fourteen"

While moving these amendments, I would like to submit that the financial implications involved in reducing the waiting period from three days will not be large The only argument that can be offered on behalf of Government is that in the United Kingdom Workmen's Compensation Act, the waiting period is three days and, therefore, we should also adopt that here If a comparison were to be made in that way, then we should consider whether we are enjoying the same social security measures as are enjoyed by the workers in the United Kingdom l do not know how, suddenly, the hon Minister says that in the original Bill, it was five days, but later on, in the informal meeting which we had, he made it three days I should verv seriously think whether I should attend such informal meetings at all, in view of the accusation made by the hon Deputy Minister the other day, because the proceedings were not recorded by any reporters or even the minutes were not recorded, we are not in a position to fIntroduced with the recommendation of the President. *Published in the Gazette of India Extraordinary Part II-Section 2, dated 22-2-1959.
