

[Shri Jawaharlal Nehru]

with success and the fighting there will end and there will be a cease fire. It must be remembered that the whole basis of the Geneva agreement was that the countries in Indo-China must not join any military bloc and must be more or less neutral because the moment they try to do so, the other side came into the picture and challenged it. This applies to Laos. And the difficulty in Laos has been the attempt of various sides to push them or to pull them into some kind of policy which is more allied to one or of the policies or military blocs on either side, and that has led to fighting there. The only solution of Laos can be that Laos should be what is called the "neutral country—I do not like the word "neutral" as applied to India, I reject it, but so far as Laos is concerned that would be a correct description—in which the various parties or groups are represented in the Government and they follow a policy of not committing themselves to any of these military alliances. Unless that is aimed at I do not think there will be any solution. That is what Prince Souvanna Phouma who came here stood for. He was Prime Minister sometime, but ultimately he was more or less pushed out by other developments and by these different pulls by different military factions, one on one side and another on the other side. As soon as that happens arms come in from outside. There have been plenty of arms coming in from both sides of these military blocs, and that makes the situation very serious. One of the things that should happen for the cease fire is stoppage of arms coming in from outside, from both sides of the conflicting parties.

Sir, I am sorry to have taken so much time to deal with this matter. Now, I shall hand over this paper to the Table. [See Appendix IV, annexure No. 5].

Shri Braj Raj Singh (Ferozabad): Sir, may we be allowed to have some clarification from the hon. Prime Minister?

Mr. Speaker: Hon. Members will have ample opportunity when we have the debate on External Affairs. They will read the statement in detail and clear up all their doubts then.
